NOAA Administrator's Diversity and Inclusion Policy Statement

In today's highly competitive environment, when everyone is fighting for limited resources and talent, having a workplace that integrates diversity and inclusion into its business practices is not just a good idea, it is a vital component for organizational success. Research shows that organizations are more productive, innovative, and better able to attract talent when they embrace diversity and inclusion. For a scientific agency like NOAA, innovation is a key driver of growth. Without diversity, we limit our ability to innovate. Without inclusion, diversity becomes meaningless, and any benefits associated with diversity will not be realized. The two concepts are inseparable, and begin with an inclusive environment.

We must strive to create inclusive workplaces that are free of discrimination, harassment, and reprisal, where integrity, fairness, teamwork, and equity are the norm, not the exception. These are environments where employees feel they truly belong and are safe to be their authentic selves, and where every person is treated with dignity and respect. When we create these types of environments, we can attain inclusion. It is then, and only then, when we reap the full benefits of diversity and can embrace the unique perspectives that diversity provides us to propel us towards greater success, both individually and organizationally.

Because there has been so much individual focus on diversity and inclusion, there can be a tendency for individuals to assume a "check the box" mentality. Where they host or attend a training class or some other event on diversity and inclusion and feel they are done. However, diversity and inclusion are so much more than that. They are not concepts to be understood solely through training and organizational initiatives, but rather by adopting a cultural attitude that embraces them—a mindset rooted in the basic components of good leadership. It is impossible to articulate how critical a role diversity and inclusion play in helping NOAA effectively accomplish its mission.

I strongly support diversity and inclusion and reaffirm my commitment to seeing that NOAA not only embraces these concepts, but fully integrates them into our business practices and our organizational culture. It is not something that can be done by simply implementing a broad-sweeping organizational initiative. Each and every one of us needs to be fully committed to achieving this goal if we are to be successful. All of us share in the responsibility for creating and maintaining an inclusive workplace. At its most basic level, this means treating everyone with dignity and respect. If we cannot afford our colleagues that simple courtesy, no matter what the organization does, we will not be able to create a truly inclusive environment.

Creating inclusive environments that value diversity can be difficult because it forces us to embrace that which is different from us. It challenges our beliefs and requires not only a fundamental change in what we do, say, and think, but also to constantly self-assess and adjust our behaviors. This can be difficult, but the benefits of diversity come from a unique mix of all of our differences where together we are far better. So, I challenge each and every one of you. Take the time to self-reflect and ask yourself, "Am I doing all I can do to create an inclusive environment in my workplace?" Then, personally commit to helping make NOAA a more inclusive environment. If we all work together, we can make NOAA the best it can be, and achieve the goal of becoming a Model Workplace.

Sincerely,

Dr. Neil Jacobs

Executive Summary

NOAA's unique mission of science, service and stewardship demands a diverse workforce to reflect, understand, and respond to the varied communities and stakeholders we serve. Equally important is an inclusive work environment that enhances organizational performance. NOAA's sustained commitment to strengthening diversity and enriching inclusion is critical to enable preeminent weather research and forecasting, promote sustainable economic uses of America's oceans and coasts, and support ecosystems that are resilient to inevitable change.

Fostering a diverse and inclusive workforce is a top priority for the Federal Government and a mission imperative for NOAA. Empirical studies demonstrate that diversity management is a first step in improving workplace performance, and individuals' sense of inclusion within their organization is necessary to leverage the diversity and maximize productivity. Sabharwal (2014), for example, found that "productive workplaces exist when employees are encouraged to express their opinions, and their input is sought before making important organizational decisions."

This Plan provides a roadmap for building a more inclusive work environment that expands and leverages diversity to achieve mission goals and business objectives. Inherent to NOAA's approach is the reality that diverse workforces require inclusive environments to thrive. Inclusion requires a culture that connects each team member to the organization and encourages communication, flexibility, and fairness. NOAA celebrates diversity throughout the organization and aims to provide culture in which all individuals are welcomed to contribute to their full potential.

Strengthening leadership accountability at all levels is critical for sustaining progress toward the diversity and inclusion goals articulated in this plan. However, successful implementation of the goals and objectives in this plan requires contributions from every individual within our Agency. The FY20-24 NOAA Inclusive Diversity Strategic Plan builds on the ambitious FY17-19 plan and addresses gaps identified through NOAA's Management Directive 715. Line and Staff Offices (LO/SOs) were engaged in evolving NOAA's strategic approach. This Plan also links the goals and objectives of the Department of Commerce to Line Office diversity and inclusion strategic plans and incorporates government-wide priorities established by the Office of Personnel Management.

Introduction

Envisioning Diversity & Inclusion

NOAA's Vision for Diversity and Inclusion

An inclusive environment in which NOAA leverages diversity to achieve mission goals and business objectives and maximizes the potential of individuals and the organization.

Defining Diversity & Inclusion

Assessing Diversity & Inclusion

Measuring the impact of various initiatives to improve D&I is often a difficult proposition. To assist agencies with this issue the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) has included questions in the Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey (FEVS)² that are used to gauge employee perceptions of D&I within their respective agencies. These measures provide quantitative benchmarks for agencies to use to measure their progress with D&I initiatives.

NOAA FEVS responses are combined into D&I categories by the Best Places to Work in the Federal Government® NOAA Agency Report.³

Valuing Diversity & Inclusion

NOAA is an agency that enriches life through science. Our reach goes from the surface of the sun to the depths of the ocean floor as we work to keep the public informed of the changing environment around them. The multiple mission areas for NOAA are rapidly evolving and increasingly complex, demanding higher levels of collective readiness and capabilities across NOAA's workforce. At the same time, the communities NOAA serves are becoming increasingly diverse. OPM describes three tangible benefits to focusing on diversity and inclusion: serving our communities and being socially responsible, increasing innovation, and getting a return on investment. NOAA requires these benefits to sustain our long-term organizational excellence in science, stewardship, and service.

To provide high-quality, responsive customer service to the public, we need a workforce that reflects the best and brightest of American society. A diverse workforce provides exactly this through varied backgrounds, perspectives, and skills. By fully including our workforce, we can maximize our performance by taking full advantage of our workforce diversity. This will provide NOAA with stronger capabilities to advance our ability to understand and anticipate changes in the Earth's environment, improve society's ability to make scientifically informed decisions, and conserve and manage ocean and coastal ecosystems and resources.

Committing to Diversity & Inclusion

NOAA is fully committed to advancing diversity and inclusion at all levels to achieve our mission goals and business objectives, and maximize the potential of our workforce and the organization as a whole. In making this commitment, NOAA recognizes that all employees, contractors, supervisors, and leaders at all levels play a critical role in realizing this vision. All team members support a diverse workforce and an inclusive environment by demonstrating respect and integrity with and for each other in every aspect of daily work.

Achieving Results

Effectively implementing this Diversity and Inclusion Strategic Plan will be critical to NOAA’s success. OICR will lead the overall implementation, with oversight from the NEC and full support from senior leadership. Line and Staff Office executives will maintain accountability for each plan objective, working with their colleagues, teams, and Agency Councils as appropriate to advance these objectives and support tactics. Together, leadership and OICR will engage NOAA’s workforce in all Offices to achieve results. OICR will share guidance to implement and assess our progress toward achieving these goals and objectives. NOAA is aware that many factors (such as changing demographics of the labor force) may influence and challenge the execution of this plan over the next few years. OICR and NEC will continually monitor our tactics and progress toward our objectives to update implementation efforts as appropriate. NOAA team members can expect to receive periodic information and reports regarding progress toward the goals outlined in this plan.

Appendix A: Roles and Responsibilities

NOAA team members at all levels play a critical role in building a diverse and inclusive NOAA. Key roles and responsibilities are summarized below.
